NAHU Welcomes Adam Brackemyre as New Director of State Affairs

(Arlington, VA) –The National Association of Health Underwriters' (NAHU) Board of Trustees announced recently that Adam Brackemyre has accepted the position of Director of State Affairs. Adam will be covering the northeast and middle Atlantic states.

“Adam's track record of success is well-documented, and we are confident that he has the talent to represent NAHU with distinction,” stated David Fear, NAHU president. “With Brackemyre’s experience and knowledge of the field, it will be a relatively easy transition for him; he will hit the ground running. We are delighted that he will be working with us.”

“I am honored to accept this position at a key time in the maturation of NAHU and the health insurance industry. I am impressed with NAHU's overall strengths and I look forward to enriching its legislative relationships and working toward its reform efforts. I plan to consult with NAHU members, legislators and policy-makers to learn how we can work together to help the uninsured,” said Brackemyre.

Prior to coming to NAHU, Brackemyre served as the assistant director of government affairs for the Council for Affordable Health Insurance (CAHI). While working at CAHI, he worked as a state and federal lobbyist and covered various issues for the organization. Brackemyre has been active in the health policy arena for four years, beginning as a staff and research assistant for the CAHI, later serving as the executive director of the Coalition Against Guaranteed Issue (CAGI).

Brackemyre, an Indiana native, has a degree in economics from DePauw University and is working on his Masters of Public Policy degree at George Mason University.
